Property Taxes: Amounts Unknown

How much property tax will Daly City homeowners have to pay, now that Proposition 13 has passed?

Nobody knows.

Thomas Collins of the county assessor's office explained to City Council members Monday that the taxes could be calculated a number of ways.

"As of today, we will be using existing values on the rolls as of 1975," Collins said.

Most of those values date back to 1971, the last year that all of Daly City was reappraised. But Collins noted that a few "hot spots" were reappraised in 1973 and 1974.

According to Prop. 13, a home that changes hands or is improved greatly must be appraised at full market value.

Collins said the Board of Equalization, which meets Thursday, may decide to appraise all homes, for tax purposes, at 1975 market values.

He remarked that he believes it would be more fair to do that, but said he would need a year with a full staff to recalculate 1975 values throughout the county.

Council members reminded Collins that Prop. 13 takes effect July 1.

However, they were not pleased about reported inequities in appraisals.

Councilman Anthony Giammona said most of the Daly City people he knows watched their home appraisals go up 67 to 100 percent last year and another 23 to 50 percent this year.

"I don't understand why we got hit twice," he commented.

Collins explained that his office wasn't picking on Daly City. He said appraisers were making up for the long period during which Daly City houses weren't re-evaluated.

Giammona also asked about the gap between appraised values and selling prices in various cities. For example, he said, a Daly City home appraised at $67,000 might sell for $87,000, whereas "down the Peninsula" a house appraised at $200,000 might sell for $350,000.

"I get the feeling that we up here are paying a lot more," he said.

Collins agreed. Although he said appraisers aim at fixing values at 85 percent of the selling price, he explained that few cities are at that ratio.

"If you average it out over two years, they come closer," he said.

Giammona commented that the state should require appraisals to be made with the same frequency in all areas. Collins replied that the state makes up for the difference by withholding some money when a city's home values aren't current.

When the appraisals are established, a homeowner can figure his property tax by taking 1 percent of the appraised value and deducting a $75 homeowner's exemption.

What about the 2 percent increase that Prop. 13 allows each year?

That's another problem. Collins said no one can decide whether to tack on 2 percent for each year since the 1975-76 appraisals — a total of 6 percent — or whether the 2 percent increase takes effect after this year.

Parents, Kids Fight to Keep School Open

READY TO DO BATTLE

Parents and their children who attend Olympia School in Daly City are angry that the Jefferson Elementary School District Board of Trustees may close the school in addition to three others in the district which already have been shut down. In front, from left to right, are three organizers of the protest group, Judy Hansel, Tami Uziel (PTA president) and Elizabeth Ting. About 150 parents turned out last Wednesday (June 21) to protest the Proposed closing, 200 Monday night.

BY JOHN CURRY

Olympia School parents again protested to the Jefferson Elementary School District Board of Trustees Monday night the closing of the school and likely will do so again Wednesday.

In a hearing that generated the fervor of a community crusade, parents streamed to the microphone for three hours. They sounded warnings, but they also offered suggestions for keeping Olympia, the smallest of the district's schools but one of its best-rated, open, at least for another year.

The evening began with a dozen children carrying placards in front of the school proclaiming "Save Olympia," as their parents directed.

The hearing, the second in less than a week, drew a crowd of some 200 to the school multiuse room, a good percentage of parents for a school of 231 students.

The proposed closure, recommended by Superintendent Pete Hansen as a cost-saving measure after the passage of Proposition 13, will be on the board agenda for a vote at the 8 p.m. meeting Wednesday at the district office in Daly City.

The parents Monday night repeatedly applauded the dozen speakers and a slide show depicting dangerous conditions young children would have to face walking to Westlake School if Olympia closes.

The Hansen plan calls for students at Olympia, a "walk-in" school now because its Northgate Avenue campus is near all its students and no busing is needed, to be divided between Westlake, Tobias and Garden Village schools.

The slide show, by Dan and Gina Hirsch, illustrated a dirty and unsafe pedestrian overpass on Lake Merced Boulevard, an open field next to the city sewage treatment plant that can't be seen from the street, a narrow glass-strewn stairway and hazardous traffic conditions along Lake Merced and John Daly boulevards, Where there are no sidewalks on the route to Westlake School.

"My daughter probably will be driven," Michael Sampson, 7 Westhaven Drive, told the board, adding, "I wonder if a child's life is worth $58,000." Closing of Olympia would save the district an estimated $58,834 in operating costs

27 City Workers On Firing Line

BY TERRY DAVENPORT

A doomsday prophecy for 27 Daly City employees was spelled out neatly on a rosy-pink piece of paper circulated at the City Council meeting Monday.

The paper was drafted by City Manager David Rowe in response to the council's request for a budget that would take Daly City through Sept. 1.

By that date, Rowe proposes firing 27 city employees and eliminating 30 other positions currently vacant.

Rowe advised dismissing nine library employees, all seven Community Service Center workers and the Redevelopment Agency's 2½ employees.

Other proposed firings are: maintenance, 2; recreation, 2; recreation, parks & maintenance administration, 1; central service division (non-parking meters), 1; city manager's office, 1; parks division, 1; planning and zoning, ½.

The council previously had voted to eliminate all temporary and parttime workers.

Rowe mentioned that Daly City can expect $800,000 to $1.2 million in state assistance through legislation passed Friday, but he said the higher amount still would leave Daly City short by $2.3 million.

To cope with property tax revenues lost due to Proposition 13, Rowe has devised a five-phase plan that eliminates 13 fulltime city positions in each phase. September 1 will mark the end of Phase II.

The council voted to meet Thursday at 7 p.m. in the council chambers to discuss Rowe's proposed summer budget. The dead-

Rowe Defends Overruns; Anyone Want a 'Portable'?

Without controversial subjects related to Proposition 13 scheduled for action, Daly City's council members Monday night sailed through all 27 items on their agenda with unanimous votes.

The dozen or so members of the public attending sat up in their seats with interest when City Manager David Rowe energetically defended the city's handling of cost overruns.

Rowe denied a story last Friday in an area newspaper that said he had spent $35,000 more than had been allocated for his office and community promotion.

Rowe explained that the additional expenses he had incurred were well publicized and were approved in public by the council.

Among the extra costs were $9,000 in salaries and $6,500 for part-time wages for added personnel to assume duties previously not required of the city manager's office; $2,700 for rental and use of a photocopying machine to prepare documents for the council and the public; $2,500 for a garbage rate adjustment study requested by the council and $1,900 for travel to Coastal Zone Commission hearings and other events.

Rowe commented that the article failed to mention other areas where the city had saved money.

A plan to move the Daly City Community for Children's Services portable day care building fell flat when the council learned that DCCCS did not apply for a $5,000 grant that the council was prepared to match.

The council also learned that only 14 children use the child care center — 10 of whom could be handled in private homes.

Mayor William Schumacher said, "For the money being spent, we could send those four kids to Hawaii."

Councilman Albert Teglia asked the staff to try to find a purchaser for the building.

In other business, the council:

• Approved environmental impact reports and use permits for a used car lot at 3356 San Jose Ave., a chicken and pizza restaurant at 311 E. Market St. and a car wash at 2323 Geneva Ave.

• Scheduled public hearings for July 17 on electrical permit fees, for July 24 on weed abatement and an application to change a lot at the southeast corner of Schwerin Street and Geneva Avenue from multiple-family residential to industrial, and for Aug. 21 on a zoning ordinance amendment regarding off-street parking.

Fireman Loses Appeal

A fireman's protests of discriminatory treatment did not sway Daly City's City Council from censuring him Monday night for failing to obey an order while on duty.

The council voted unanimously to uphold the findings of the city's Personnel Board that Fire Engineer Operator Jay Modglin had refused to fill in as acting captain of Fire Station No. 2 on March 10 as ordered.

The council also affirmed a 24-hour suspension for Modglin without pay.

Modglin's attorney, Duane Reno, argued that Modglin was upset about having been passed over for a promotion to captain.

"He was told, 'Even though we aren't going to promote you to captain, we're going to make you do the work,'" Reno explained.

The attorney said other firefighters routinely turned down requests to substitute as acting captain and that no one, except Modglin, had been specifically ordered to assume the post in recent years.

"There is a lack of equal treatment," Reno remarked, adding that such discrimination was unlawful and thus it was justifiable for Modglin not to comply with the command.

Reno said Modglin did not deny that he had refused to obey the order.

"We don't think that is the issue here," he commented.

City Attorney Albert Polonsky pointed out that Modglin had an opportunity to explain his reasons for disobeying the order at the time of the incident, but that the fireman had declined to explain until later.

Polonsky said he believes Modglin was bitter about not being promoted.

"There's no law that says you have to say why you didn't select someone," he added.

Reno explained that Modglin felt Fire Chief H. Keith Schrock was behind the discriminatory policy and that Modglin didn't want to give his reasons when Schrock questioned him.

Modglin said he objects to the method of appointing acting captains. In one instance, he noted that a fireman with only three years of experience was made acting captain after several senior firemen turned down requests that they take over a fire station.

The fireman said another fireman's refusal to obey an order several years ago was related to the same problem. That firemen received a letter of reprimand.

But the council voted 5-0 to uphold the Personnel Board's more severe decision that Modglin not be paid for the day he was suspended.

The council members talked about the need to over the next school year, according to Hansen.

Tammie Uziel, Olympia PTA president, called the school, which has had no declining enrollment problem, "socially and academically sound" and asked, "Why should Olympia be penalized for other schools' declining enrollment?"

Carolee Fadgett, a teacher in the district and an Olympia parent, suggested that a citizens advisory committee be formed to "study (the) entire district operation, its goals, needs and assets, and form a new, efficient school district from the ground up."

18 "If that means closing some schools, so be it, but it must be a total community effort," she said. The result would be a district "educationally sound and affordable," she said.

Dale Lingscheid, another parent, charged that "You haven't shown the taxpayers any consideration." He asked that the district sell its Savage site, a large parcel near Serramonte High School originally planned for another school but now in limbo.

Board President Dorothy Adams replied that money from the sale would only go to the state, by law, and that it was thought best to keep it and possibily trade it for new school sites on San Bruno Mountain when 3,500 new homes now planned and approved there are built.

Carl Hilsz, 25 Dorchester Drive, said the parents had collected over 1,000 signatures at the nearby shopping center in just one day in support of keeping the school open.

Mrs. Hirsch asked that if state funding, approved last week to provide 89.3 percent of the JESD 1977-78 budgeted expenses, couldn't be used, since the Olympia operating costs would be ½ of 1 per percent of that.

Mrs. Adams replied that that was less than had been expected and that the $5.5 billion state surplus this year will be only $3 billion next year, meaning less money then for the schools. "Money saved this year may be needed far more desperately next year," she said.

One reason for Hansen's selection of Olympia for closure was that there would be room at Tobias after the Mentally Gifted Minors program was moved out. Hansen has pointed out that all the receiving schools still would be under capacity even with the incoming Olympia pupils.

The MGM program, which costs the district $65,000 year, is being broken up, another victim of Jarvis-Gann, with the bright students no longer to gather once a week at Tobias for accelerated instruction geared to their abilities.

Linda Telles, a Tobias parent, indirectly asked that the MGM be kept together and not scattered to the students' home schools.

"Give people a year to adjust. This is an irreversible move that may be regretted," she said. She noted also that the birthrate is increasing again and that almost all of the families now moving into the Westlake area have children.

line for adopting a full or partial budget for the coming fiscal year is June 30.

City agencies that would be wiped out under Rowe's tentative budget: Redevelopment Agency, Community Service Center and the History, Arts and Science Committee.

He proposed 16 percent of the usual funding for community promotion, 30 to 39 percent of normal allocations for recreation and 40 to 49 percent of last year's funding for personnel and library services.

City functions with the highest priority on Rowe's list — 90 to 100 percent of the usual funding — are police, fire, engineering, building inspection, electrical, parks and water.

Funding at 80 to 89 percent of the norm would go to the City Council, city treasurer, city attorney, planning, finance and streets.

In the middle would be the city manager, city clerk and maintenance functions at 70 to 79 percent funding; recreation, parks and maintenance administration with 60 to 69 percent funding; and public works community development administration with 50 to 59 percent funding.

Initial reactions from the audience were mixed.

Donald Bevilacqua of the Chamber of Commerce said Daly City badly needs redevelopment.

George Kirchubel said he was shocked by the failure of the proposed budget to take into account other revenues such as business sales taxes and the parking meter fund.

"There will be an adequate money supply. There is no reason for this," he declared.

William Wade of the Westlake Homeowner's Association defended the proposed budget, pointing out that Proposition 13 was a call for less government.

"It's inevitable that somebody's going to be fired," he remarked.

distinguish between requests and orders, stressing that orders must be obeyed at all costs.

However, Councilman James Tucker said Modglin had served as a "sacrificial lamb" in bringing other issues before the council. He suggested alphabetizing the promotion list, so that firemen are less likely to know their grades, and he asked that a policy be made spelling out how acting captains are to be chosen.

Councilmen Albert Teglia and Victor Kyriakis objected to outlining selection procedures. "This is carrying things to the extreme. Must we have procedures that we have to refer to before any order is given?" asked Kyriakis.

The council let Tucker's suggestions drop.

County Grand Jury Hits Sheriff's Office

By DUANE SANDUL

County Sheriff John R. McDonald Jr. came under attack in a county grand jury report released today which also criticized "primitive conditions" at the county morgue.

On the positive side, the final 1977-78 grand jury report hailed the administrations of County Clerk-Recorder Marvin Church and Public Health Division Director Dr. James Bodie.

The 115-page document included recommendations in most county functions.

Overcrowding of county jail facilities was said to have continued "to deteriorate and will continue to do so until such time as the sheriff more aggressively seeks solutions."

The grand jury recommended that McDonald take steps to reopen a medium security facility in La Honda, which was closed in December after the discovery that asbestos was used in the construction of the ceiling.

"Thus far he (McDonald) has been unable to obtain funds or to expedite the cooperation of other county agencies in getting the fault corrected," the panel asserted.

It also recommended that McDonald immediately seek to use 22 cells available in the San Mateo Police Department to alleviate overcrowding at the main jail in Redwood City.

The grand jury revealed receipt of several complaints from inmates concerning alleged abuse, ranging from denial of basic hygiene needs to use of excessive force.

"Most of the complaints were explained away by the overcrowded conditions," the report stated.

"Although the more serious charges of excessive force were not substantiated by evidence or witnesses, the grand jury became concerned with the apparent lack of procedure used by the sheriff in handling inmate complaints," the report stated.

The panel said that it brought that concern to McDonald's attention August 30, 1977.

Pacifica Chops Here, There

Slowly and painfully, the Pacifica City Council tentatively chopped away $60,678 from the projected budget for four city departments Thursday evening.

Council members said they would consider reinstating some programs if funding is passed along to cities from the state's surplus.

Without state help, Pacifica stands to lose $1,570,000 in 1978-79 due to Proposition 13 — 36 percent of all its general fund revenues. As of this morning, it appeared state funding might require cities to reduce overall budgets by only 10 percent.

With the worst consequences in mind, the City Council eliminated $23,050 of its own budget of $62,547 for 1978-79, including $16,000 for the Pacifica Chamber of Commerce, $2,500 for the League of California Cities, $2,300 for the Association of Bay Area Governments, $1,000 for conferences and in-service training and $1,250 for capital outlays.

The council decided against deleting contributions of $1,300 to the San Mateo County Convention and Visitors Bureau, $10,000 to the Pacifica Youth Service Bureau and $73 to the Congress of Elected Officials.

A total of $32,604 was eliminated from the city manager's budget of $229,235. The largest item cut was the assistant city manager's position, which costs the city $30,529, including benefits. The council also deleted $1,150 in conference and in-service training expenses and $925 in capital outlays.

There was considerable discussion over whether to eliminate the position of budget and research officer, which will cost Pacifica $31,024, including benefits.

Mayor Nick Gust and Councilwoman Ellie McGuire argued that department heads could achieve the same budget cuts that the budget and research officer achieved.

The new position was held during part of 1977-78 by Kym Rhodes, who reported that she saved the city $76,684.

Gust and Mrs. McGuire were outvoted by the other council members, meaning that the job will be budgeted next year.

In the Department of Finance, the council saved $4,824 by deleting $205 budgeted for furniture and fixtures, $1,419 for conferences and in-service training, $600 for overtime and $2,600 for a half-time stock clerk position.

Finance Director Gul Ramchandani told the council his department saved about $40,000 in departmental expenses over last year by reducing the amount of loans from banks. The total budget for that department now is projected at $181,168.

The city attorney's budget of $39,306 was slashed by $10,200 when the council decided to halve departmental expenses to $10,000 and omit $200 budgeted for conferences and in-service training.

The longest debate raged over which memberships the council should allow to drop. The council deleted $16,000 budgeted for the chamber of commerce when it learned that the chamber's manager, Jim Gallagher, is trying to make the organization self-sufficient next year.

City Manager Don Weidner said the League of California Cities provides many benefits to cities, including lobbying in Sacramento and instant answers to questions by city officials. But he said he did not believe the city saved $2,500 budgeted for the league by belonging last year. The council decided to drop out of the league.

Jefferson Brings Budget into Line

The cost-cutting scalpel mandated by Proposition 13 is getting down to the bone for the Jefferson Elementary School District.

The district got the word Wednesday night on the major basic cuts it will require to live within a $4,108,654 revenue loss for the coming fiscal year.

The board of trustees received a tentative budget from Dr. John Trompeter, assistant superintendent of administrative services, which indicated that if the district is to balance its budget as of July 1, as required by law, it will have to cut the salaries of all or most employees by 39 or 40 percent.

A 39 percent cut would save some $3,300,000, a 40 percent cut $85,353 more, Trompeter said.

He added that a bill presently in the state legislative hopper would allow another 30 days for school districts to submit budgets to their county schools offices, providing more time for them to decide what to do with limited funds and perhaps learn how much of the state's announced $5.2 billion surplus will be allocated locally to make up property tax losses.

The board set its regular June 28 meeting for a public hearing on the tentative budget, at which time, Trompeter said, he would recommend the salary cuts for all certificated, classified and administrative personnel in the district.

This spring, the board terminated 88 teachers because of declining enrollment, but state law requires that teachers being terminated be notified by April 15 that they won't be back in September.

That means no more teacher cuts for next year; so, the salary slash is the alternative.

Trompeter's tentative budget calls for $840,858 in other cuts, including the elimination of all bilingual and summer school aides (the summer school was cancelled last week, anyway), two management positions, a school secretary and library assistant, summer clerical help and eight custodians.

Nearly every non-salary item in the budget is down by varing percentages and no vacant positions will be filled.

New County Budget Major Achievement

San Mateo County Manager David Nichols and the Board of Supervisors undertook an essential but agonizing task in their just-completed nine days of county budget review to bring it in line with the sharply lowered property tax revenues mandated by voter approval of Proposition 13.

In a highly responsible, systematic manner, the manager and the board carried out the detailed steps necessary to prepare a viable budget incorporating cuts of approximately $40 million, and gave it tentative approval. This was an exhausting task and could easily have descended into pure chaos. That it did not is a tribute to the cooperative, responsible attitude of all concerned, including the many organizational representatives and members of the public who attended the sessions.

The final budget cannot be set, of course, until the amount of replacement revenue allocated to San Mateo County from the state surplus becomes known next week. Indications so far are that this may range from $10 million to $16 million. The board has set additional meetings on June 28 and 29 to make these modifications and come up with a final budget for the fiscal year which begins July 1.

Possible moves by the Board of Supervisors at that time to restore some of the relatively heavy cuts scheduled for the sheriff's department and the district attorney's office, as well as for public health and social services would be strongly favored by this newspaper.

In its study sessions completed this week, Nichols and the board dealt prudently and professionally with many complicated and urgent factors, including federal unemployment insurance procedures and deadlines. This was a highly difficult and painful task. Their efforts merit the appreciation and commendation of all residents of San Mateo Count

Victims of Some Unknown Poison

Steelhead Float to Sea

The sight in Pacifica's San Pedro Creek in March wasn't a pretty one.

About 600 colorful steelhead trout headed toward the ocean after the spawning season were floating flat on their backs, victims of some unknown poison.

Fish and Game wardens inspected but never clearly identified the cause. They suspect — because of the high chlorine content of the water at the time — that someone carelessly dumped swimming pool water into a storm drain that flowed into San Pedro and ultimately into the Pacific Ocean.

But, unless they see it happen, fish and game wardens are powerless to do much about it.

"You've got so many homes along these urban streams," Fish and Game Supervisor Ivan Paulsen said. "One person could spray their plants or dump their oil down the curbs and that's it."

The public is furious when an huge oil tanker dumps its contents into the Bay's waters, Paulsen said. But, the public seldom realizes that it also contributes a significant amount of oil to the Bay through its storm drains.

In fact, it's doubtful if even a quarter of San Mateo County's residents realize what they pour into their gutters goes directly through the storm drains into a nearby creek — not into the city's sewer system for treatment, Fish and Game Warden Morgan Akin said.

For the last two years, water supply — not necessarily water quality — has been high on the minds of the public. The drought meant that most streams and creeks in this county were dry.

But, San Mateo County is normally a water-oriented region from its 20 miles of Bay front to its 20 miles of ocean coastline.

The county's major drinking water supply, Crystal Springs Reservoir, is "absolutely the cleanest of all the Bay Area's reservoirs," according to San Francisco Water Department biologist Steve Leonard.

There are two reasons, Leonard said, that the man-made lakes' contents are so pure. One, he said, is that the watershed surrounding the reservoir protects it from rain waters that bring silt, residue and poisons.

Another reason is that high amounts of pure, Hetch Hetchy mountain water are poured into the south end of the reservoir. That mountain run-off, he said, is far superior to any well water reservoir in the state.

In fact, Leonard said, about 60 percent of the year, water coming directly out of Crystal Springs outlet is safe enough to drink without chlorination.

But, nature has been less considerate of San Mateo County's streams and creeks. The problem is the surface runoff that trickles into the waterways.

Runoff is the water that washes over land and finds its way into storm drains on your street. From there, it flows into creeks and streams, taking in its path just about everything that falls onto the ground in an urban county.

Amateur mechanics dump their crankcase oil in the gutter. Autos spurt exhaust into the air and leave residue on the ground. Leaves, dirt and grass clipppings pile up, decompose and wash into the system.

Birds, dogs and cats are among the culprits, too.

Just like most every other effort in the field of pollution cleanup, a federal mandate forced counties on the Bay to prepare "surface runoff studies" — detailed accounts of how all that waste will be handled in the future.

"If you can get people to stop dumping things — like oil — into the drains, then you stand a chance at helping water quality," said Geri Farman, the county Planning Department's surface runoff coordinator.

San Mateo County's plan — which 15 of the 19 cities approved — lists San Pedro Creek as the No. 1 problem in the county, in the eyes of the Department of Fish and Game.

According to the plan, silt, stagnant water, bacteria and sewer system difficulties all contribute to the mess.

Pacifica City Manager Don Weidner said the city just finished spending $116,000 on a sanitary sewer line designed primarily to alleviate raw sewage flowing into San Pedro Creek. And, he noted, there was no financial help from the state government.

GETTING TO THE SOURCE

Fish and Game inspectors know the water coming from the south fork of San Pedro Creek is pure. But, they are appalled at what happens to the flow after it mingles with the input from storm drains.

A Tasteless 'Pot of Gold'

Suddenly all eyes are on Sacramento as state legislators prepare to dole out the giant Pot of Gold that has been building up in state coffers.

Local officials are waiting for their share of the booty with baited breath. The number of dollars each local district receives will determine how many heads must roll.

MEANWHILE, federal bureaucrats are rubbing their hands with glee at the prospect of receiving $2.3 billion more from California taxpayers — the result of reduced federal income tax deductions due to Proposition 13.

Faced with meager funds this year, and even less next year, local officials are begging higher levels of government to remove such programs as welfare from local administration.

Surely the voters who approved Proposition 13 didn't understand the subtle shift of power that would occur. But it is inevitable that the state and federal politicians will become more powerful as they accumulate more of the taxpayers' dollars.

THOSE WHO hold the purse strings get to make up the rules that others must follow for handouts.

Ironically, although the aim of Proposition 13 is to cut governmental spending, the cost of running any program tends to increase as administration passes from the local to the state to the federal level.

This brings to mind Millbrae Councilwoman Mary Griffin's pet theory of government:

"The amount of cost is in proportion to the distance from the source and the amount of control is in inverse proportion to the distance from the source."

STATE regulations regarding such items as sewage treatment plants and lands in the Coastal Zone are a continual thorn in the side of local officials. The expensive, often meaningless requirements by the state are particularly irritating now, when whole city departments are fighting for survival.

While council members agonize over how many libraries to close, the last thing on which they want to spend money is an environmental impact report required by some obscure state law.

But leave it to the federal lawmakers to come up with the most senseless requirements. They are the ones who demanded that one business owner who worked alone in a tiny building equip it with separate restrooms labeled "Men" and "Women."

PACIFICA City Manager Donald Weidner has pointed out "You only find programs like investigating the sex life of the African spotted frog coming from remote, disconnected federal levels of government. You don't see grants like that happening very often at the city level, because city government is much closer to the people."

Cit officials agree that putting programs into action becomes more costly when they are administered from afar.

Weidner said "It's been my experience that people who have to make decisions about programs and money who are isolated on the 50th floor of a huge government building away from the scene where the program is actually performed have no idea of its cost efficiency, its relevancy or even of its need."

MILLBRAE City Administrator Lee Horner recently remarked "If you let Washington or the state run a program, then they're going to add to their bureaucracy. Just look at the federal budget and how it's increased over the past years and the number of additional people who have been hired — where, in many cases, local budgets have not increased and the number of employees have dropped."

Horner has estimated the cost of running a program at the federal level at 10 to 15 percent higher than when a program is administered locally. He gave as an example the Comprehensive Employment Training Act, a federal program that attempts to employ the unemployable.

"The reams of paperwork and forms and other things we have to fill out just to satisfy the guidelines of that program! It takes quite a bit of my time," Horner expalined.

HE SPENDS hours every week meeting CETA requirements — all for the benefit of having seven CETA employees. There were more CETA workers in Millbrae, but Horner had to fire some goofing off on the job.

Why are the upper echelons of government so unaware of how the public wants its taxes to be spent? One reason is that they don't have much contact with citizens. Mrs. Griffin said one state official actually told her that his stint as a local official was far more time-consuming than his present job.

Treat your guests to a walk along San Francisco's Fair Oaks Street, where Victorian houses have been resurrected to show the scrolls and gables of a gilded age of long ago. Let Judy Waldhorn be your guide. Your guests will rise up and call you blessed if you do.

IN HER book "Take a Walk Through Mission History," (Stanford Research Institute, 1974, $1), Waldhorn points to clusters of "Italianate cottages" and to examples of "stick-style" houses where local shipbuilders added decorative wooden "stick work" embellishments to emphasize the structural framework of the homes.

Number 394 Fair Oaks is an example of one of the most spectacular Victorian styles, "Queen Anne." A corner tower and a peaked roof-line are some typical aspects of this mid-1890 house. Across the street, 387 Fair Oaks is beautiful with its face of sculptured flowers and scrolls. The house at 260 was built in 1870 and has many delicate details and slanted bay windows. The way some of these Victorians are painted caused Waldhorn to call them "celebrations of style."

Ms. Waldhorn's walking tour number two follows 23rd Street from Van Ness Avenue to Guerrero. Here one finds a cluster of freshly painted "Stick-Eastlake" houses on Capp Street. Only 10 of this Victorian style remain, causing Waldhorn to observe, "In the past decade, hundreds of irreplacable Mission 'Victorians' have been replaced by gas stations or expensive apartments, thus removing needed family housing and threatening the historic identity of the Mission Community."

TOUR number three leads past the Mission United Church on Capp Street to the Korean church house at 1074 Guerrero.

These and the other houses on or near 23rd Street are so picturesque that Ms. Waldhorn found "words are inadequate to describe these handsome buildings. Only walking will reveal them fully."

In the grand old homes on Liberty Street between Valencia and Dolores, your guests will find a most colorful collection of Victorians that have been renovated and freshly painted in rich colors which dramatize their wonderful architecture. Number 159 Liberty is an "Italianate" style Victorian where Susan B. Anthony was a frequent guest.

WALDHORN'S fourth walking tour in the Mission District follows Hill and Lexington streets, where some of the oldest homes in San Francisco may be seen. As one walks past them, he wonders, with Judy Waldhorn, about their vulnerability "to the onslaught of progress, presaged by their neighbors — a parking lot, a discount variety store and an income tax service."

"Take A Walk Through Mission History" was written in 1974 as part of a series from the Stanford Research Council. The other titles are "Historic Preservation In San Francisco's Inner Mission" (2). "Walking Tour Guidebook" ($2.50), "An Amateur's Guide: Victorian Rearch in San Francisco ($1) and San Francisco Victorians: A Selected Reading List (one copy free for $1).

Each of these volumes is an index to a tour of grand old houses that have been a part of the San Francisco scene for over 100 years.

You Can Bank on It

Waiting in lines used to be something most of us just learned to live with. Now, however, with the passage of the Jarvis-Gann Initiative, standing in lines is becoming a daily nuisance, more pervasive than sinus congestion or Jerry Brown.

In some parts of the Bay Area, there is the specter of long queues of irritated folks stretching out at library desks, recreation departments, swimming pools and a host of other agencies.

So what does one do in the face of all this? One learns to practice the fine art of standing in lines. One gets in shape for the dull battles ahead. One copes.

Fortunately, none of us has to go far to find ways to hone these necessary skills. The other day, I ventured into a downtown San Mateo bank and discovered a perfect training ground for the post-Jarvis Era.

I wanted to deposit my weekly pay check. It was about noon on a sultry Thursday. That was my first mistake. As soon as I walked inside those sterile portals I realized I was in trouble. Of the bank's 14 teller windows, only two were open for regular customers. There were no less than 28 people waiting in line. The only available recreation available was to memorize the wanted posters.

I immediately asked a clerk if there was an outside window where I could go to transact my modest business in some sort of quick fashion. She said no. However, she pointed out that there was a drive-in window one floor below in the parking lot basement. "I'll try that," I chirped enthusiastically.

I strolled downstairs into the lot. There were no cars to be seen. I spotted the drive-in box and approached it gingerly. There in front of me loomed a television screen. I stumbled up to it. A woman's disembodied face appeared on the screen.

"I'd like to deposit my check, please," I said briskly.

"You have to be in a car," she said tersely, barking into her little microphone.

"But there's no one down here right now," I moaned. "Can't you take my money? Who's to know?"

"You have to be in a car. I can't do it."

"Well, would you believe I came in here on a skateboard?"

"Sure you did. And chickens have lips. I saw you come in on my monitor. And you didn't drive in, in a car or on a skateboard. I can't serve you."

I was beaten and I knew it.

Just as I was turning to head back upstairs and certain ennui, a woman in a gleaming Chrysler idled up to the TV screen. I leaned toward the driver, smiled and said, "Hi. I'm trying to make a deposit. Would you mind if I got into your car to make it?"

"Eeek," she howled, fumbling with her automatic windows. "You're a strange person. Get away from me, you masher."

With that, she roared off through the underground lot and back up into the sunlight.

Resigned to my fate, I trudged back up into the bank and got in line with everyone else. I proceeded to memorize all five suspects in bank robberies from Mountain View to South Lake Tahoe.

There is a $2,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of any of them. With luck, I can use that money to buy a skateboard. I may name it "Son of Jarvis."

Summer School on at Co-op Nursery

The demise of summer schools in San Mateo County this year shows that the opponents of Proposition 13 really knew what they were talking about.

Proponents continually called such talk "scare tactics." The cancellation of the summer school programs shows, in fact, that the opponents were scared, but that the tactics were justified.

But going beyond the pre-campaign rhetoric, the real losers in this thing are the children. They will be deprived of an additional learning experience.

OUR SCHOOLS today are criticized continually — and much of that is justified. Children in many cases are graduating without learning the basic skills. One often wonders how well today's school age generation will fare in the "outside world" without the proper skills to hold down any job other than one involving manual labor.

Certainly some will argue — and have argued in the past — that summer school is nothing more than a tax-financed babysitting program. Some of this may be true. But, with children attending five and six-week sessions, some education certainly will rub off.

Students of all ages show a lack of interest in education. I was that way, and so were you. Often I hated school and longed for the 3:05 bell. But even in classes in which I was bored stiff, I learned something. The same holds true for students today. Unless you have another problem, you can't sit in a school room all day long and not absorb something.

And the old adage holds true — something is better than nothing at all.

ANOTHER factor to be considered in the cancellation of summer schools is the lack of interaction youngsters will receive this summer. In growing up, developing an ability to get along with others is crucial. It isn't easy to get along with (often it's only tolerating) others, but the more exposure you have to it the more likely you'll learn some of the techniques necessary to get you through.

My 6-year-old had been enrolled in Belle Air School in San Bruno for the summer session, and I was looking forward to it. He lives with his mother in Marin County, and it was my belief that exposure to a different school system would do him considerable good. Children on San Bruno's east side come from families with different backgrounds and different values than those in Marin.

The exposure to those different values probably would not have been a conscious factor for my son, but it would have left an underlying understanding of yet another socio-economic group.

My son and the 1,200 other San Bruno children who had planned to attend summer school also will miss the many day-time activities which summer school provides. Parents work and cannot always provide activities which fill a child's day. And when parents get home from a day's work, it is often too much effort to begin a "whole new day" of activities for a youngster. That, too, will be missed.

THERE IS no reason, however, that the cancellation of the 1978 summer program should set a precedent which our school districts will follow in future years.

It is now up to individual school districts to devise ways of financing summer school. And it is up to the districts to put pressure on the state to find ways of financing summer sessions in future years. And parents, certainly, have their responsibility, as taxpayers and citizens, to keep that pressure alive.

Perhaps, however, voters really understood what they did when they voted for Proposition 13. Perhaps they are tired of paying for the frills like summer school and recreational activities. Perhaps they feel, as a family unit, they can better provide that type of instruction and programmed activity.

WELL, THEN, they'd better do it or face the consequences of having a future generation that doesn't read and write as well as older students today. Or discover that through a lack of activities, youngsters today will continue to believe that their only recreational outlet is the television set.

11 Scouts Clean Up On Coast

Three, add seven, add one, equals 1,500 pounds. Three pixie-like Brownie Scouts of Troop 2054, seven enthusiastic Junior Girl Scouts, and one dedicated Boy Scout, pitched in to clean up their neighborhood June 3 as part of a litter-control and environmental awareness project, collecting over 1,500 pounds of litter.

Organizing the clean-up campaign was Girl Scout and Brownie Leader Betty Fleming, who resides on Skyline Drive and is concerned with the increasing litter and dumping around the Palmetto-Skyline-Westline area, where winds trap newspapers, accumulated garbage attracts rats and where bottles, old car parts, discarded clothing, personal belongings and a myriad of other litter-accumulating objects dumped by local residents creates a constantly-growing eyesore.

Special community involvement projects count towards merit badges for the Scouts and also alerts them to the needs of their own community. Boy Scout David Moran is working toward his Eagle Scout status and must develop, organize and complete a 20-hour community betterment project as part of the requirements toward his Eagle Scout badge.

In the 2-hour project, 11-young people demonstrated what a little extra effort can produce — the 1,500 pounds of litter and garbage dropped or discarded along Daly City's open coastal space and city streets.

Former Daly City Mayor and founder of Daly City Clean Community, Councilman Al Teglia, Don Fleming and Betty Moran, city employees, Patricia Tatarian, Daly City Clean Community Committee member, pitched in to help the Scouts clean up.

Summer School on at Co-op Nursery

Village Co-operative Nursery School Director Margaret Deabill has reported that despite the Jefferson Union High School Adult Education program being cancelled for summer, parents at Village feel very strongly about continuing the quality that has made Village's Nursery School and Parent Education a strong program.

Parents enrolled for summer school have formed an ad hoc committee and formulated a plan to run the summer program for only three days a week, rather than the original five, keeping quality in both staff and program.

Parents will participate approximately four times during the six-week session, which will run from June 26 to Aug. 4. Children will be involved in individual cooking projects, be encouraged to participate in supervised art projects, explore children's literature with assistant teacher Micki Gaitan, have many outdoor play opportunities, and have some field trips with parents nearby attractions.

There are a few openings in the session, which will run from 9 a.m. to noon Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

For information call Kathy Duffy in Daly City, 994-2252, or Sandy Hilal in Pacifica, 359-6962. Tuition is $50 for the session.

THE DIET CORNER

By ELISE GENDAR

It's June, to rhyme with moon and end in weddings, orange blossoms and cream fillings, veils and mayonnaised sandwiches, blue garters and champagne. They go together.

And what's a dieter to do when confronted with the family gathering and the traditional goodies? Stay on the diet! Think out your defense against the food onslaught. That's why they send those invitations out weeks in advance, to give you time to get ready to diet in public.

ONE GLASS of champagne — it's a poor substitute for a fruit, but it will do for one day in your life. Once you've toasted the bride, reject further alcohol. Get high on the joy that abounds during such sentimental occasions.

Be wary as you pick and choose your way through whatever type of food is served. Catering places will mass-produce meals that are uniformly gravy-soaked. You'll have to scrape away what you shouldn't have and ignore the potatoes. You probably are one missing some cardboard dehydrated ones anyhow.

Vegetables are fine, buy try to short-stop the salad dressing so you may enjoy the greenery. If you've indulged in the champagne, no further indulgence in dessert is wise.

BESIDES, wedding cake is to dream on, not eat. Or at least that was the happy tradition when I was a girl.

I must admit the hors d'oeuvre-type reception is a bit more of a challenge. Search out the shrimp and cheese. Devote time to the chicken and egg. You can find diet foods if you make the effort. Eat the trimmings if you must. The carved radishes and celery, the curly parsley and lettuce will fill you, not fatten you.

The day before or the day after your wild moment of abandon at the bridal table, have a really low calorie main dish. You won't suffer one bit when it is this:

SCALLOPS WITH GREEN BEANS

⅓ cup low-calorie ginger ale
⅓ cup bouillon (chicken)
2 tablespoons dried onion flakes
1 bay leaf
1 lb. fresh sea scallops or 1 lb. frozen scallops (thawed)
⅓ cup evaporated skim milk
2 tablespoons parsley flakes
2 tablespoons dried chives
½ tablespoon dill week
1 can French style green beans, drained.

Combine first five ingredients in a saucepan. Bring to a boil; simmer about 7 minutes until scallops cook. Combine milk, parsley flakes, chives, dill weed and beans and pour over scallops. Cook over low heat until flavors blend.

DIETING is compatible with all social occasions. All it requires is careful consideration on your part, and no one need know that you are in the process of making less of yourself.

Feast on compliments of those who have not seen you for some time. As they tell you how great you look, abandon discreetly any fattening foods that have been thrust upon you. You'll find no one pays any attention to what you are doing or eating — only to what a difference there has been in your appearance.

If you would like a copy of an Inter-Home Memo to enlist your family's help with losing weight, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Elise Gendar, area director, The Diet Workshop, 2533 Taraval St., San Francisco 94116.

Good morning, good cooks.

"Mangiafagiloi" is an Italian expression meaning "eater of beans," for the beans discovered in 16th century America soon became popular in Italy, especially around Florence and in northern Italy.

Cannellini beans are large white kidney beans, originally from the New World, but now so transplanted to Italian soil that they are called Tuscan beans. In Florence you will find bean soup, rice and beans, tuna and beans, beefsteak with beans, bean appetizers, bean entrees or whatever else the ingenious cook can create.

Chick peas have been growing around the Mediterranean since ancient times and are very popular in Italy. They are particularly good cooked with Italian sausages, Italian style tomatoes and oregano, garlic and onion as directed in the following recipe for sausage and chick peas.

SALSICCE E CECI
(Sausage with Chick Peas)

1 pound sweet Italian sausages
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 can (16 oz.) Italian-style peeled tomatoes, broken up
1 teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
½ teaspoon onion powder
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
2 cans (20 oz. each) chick peas, drained

Prick the pound of sausages with a fork in several places. In a large skillet heat the two tablespoons olive oil. Add sausages; saute until brown on all sides. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 15 minutes, turning occasionally. Discard drippings. Add the one pound of tomatoes, one teaspoon salt, three-fourth teaspoon oregano leaves, half-teaspoon onion powder and one-fourth teaspoon garlic powder. Cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Add the two cans of drained chick peas; cover and simmer until beans are heated through, about 5 minutes.

Yield: 4 portions.

Pay Frozen for Education Staffers

The San Mateo County Board of Education Wednesday voted 7-0 to freeze the salary schedules of all county education employees at current levels.

The freeze, described as temporary until the full ramifications of passage of Proposition 13 are sorted out, would keep salaries from rising at all in 1978-79.

The board also urged that negotiations be continued with all employee groups.

Superintendent Dr. J. Russell Kent told the board that it is likely that the county will have to make further budget cuts as well.

Already, the county has trimmed an estimated $800,000 from its budget by eliminating summer school for handicapped children and a range of other summer services.

The $800,000 represents just over 6 percent of the county's anticipated income for 1978-79.

Kent said he expects that the county will have to trim another 4 percent from the budget. He said the state Legislature seems set on providing the county office with about 90 percent of the income which had been anticipated in the coming fiscal year.

"My concern is that we will have to make other reductions," said Kent.

Kent said there is a slim possibility that the county might be able to reinstate two of its summer programs, those for the seriously emotionally disturbed and for juvenile offenders.

Kent said he didn't want to raise false hopes for these two programs (which he described as his two top priorities) but he added that, "I'm not ruling out this possibility."

Kent also touched on a variety of other topics relating to Proposition 13 and its aftermath:

—He said it seems likely that school districts will probably receive surplus funds based on a sliding formula based on need. He said the formula for reimbursement would probably range from 91 to 85 percent. Most school districts in this county, he said, would probably fall onto the low end of that range, however.

—He said any formula would be based on what a district expects to receive in income in 1978-79. He said it is possible that districts which have undistributed reserves of more than 5 percent will have that counted against them.

—He said a move is under way to try to create a way to permit districts to dismiss teachers in the same ratio as other employees. He said there is a feeling that classified employees are going to bear the brunt of education layoffs statewide and that this circumstance ought to be rectified somehow. Classified unions and the state school boards association are supporting this push.

—He said there is another drive on to allow school districts to submit balanced budgets a month later than normal. In the past, there has been an August deadline for such documents.

—He said there is a depressing chance that the Legislature won't be able to come up with a bill for divvying up the surplus until after July 1, the start of the new fiscal year. This would pose some problems for all public agencies.

In another matter, Kent said during a break that his office will pay only $273.50 to help support a lawsuit aimed at invalidating passage of the Jarvis-Gann Initiative.

Bus Routes Reflect Loss of Summer Class

Cancellation of summer school sessions in the San Mateo County Community College District has brought on some adjustments of bus schedules by the San Mateo County Transit District.

The transit agency said the cuts in service, planned in conjunction with the summer sessions at Skyline, College of San Mateo and Canada colleges, would affect its income, too.

Route 40C, between the Burlingame civic center and CSM, will be discontinued entirely June 26.

Other changes to be effective June 26 are:

Route 43N, from First and B streets in downtown San Mateo to CSM, will suspend evening schedules until fall. The last trip of the day will leave First and B at 6:52 p.m., with the last trip from CSM at 7:08.

The last four evening trips on Route 6A, between East Palo Alto and Canada College via the Redwood City train depot, have been suspended for the summer. The last trip from Fordham and Purdue streets in East Palo Alto is at 6:11 p.m., and from Canada at 6:41.

Route 30B schedules will be delayed 10 minutes in leaving Palmetto Avenue and Manor Drive in Pacifica, beginning at 7:40 a.m. From Tanforan Shopping Center in San Bruno, 10-minute delays will be effective with the 9:30 a.m. run. This eliminates the previous 10-minute wait to collect students at Skyline.

Pipes Shut at Reservoir

A bacteria count has forced the San Francisco Water Department to shut off its pipes at Crystal Springs Reservoir since May 26 and draw water from its Hetch Hetchy supply in the Sierras.

The backup at the man-made lake serving most San Mateo County residents has raised the water level to its highest point in more than 20 years — 114 ½ feet.

"We failed to meet the drinking water standards for the month of May," said Harry Tracy, San Francisco Water Department water quality manager.

The department is expecting to be able to draw from the reservoir again by July 5.

But, a San Francisco Public Health Department official said the situation calls attention to the fact San Francisco is delivering unfiltered water to its customers.

"In this day and age, delivering that kind of water without filtration is not a high-quality, 20th century practice," said Henry Ongerth, chief of sanitary engineering education.

The Public Health Department enforces the state and federal water quality laws for drinking water sources.

"It's not at all unusual for such bodies of water to have these kind of bacteria concentrations," Ongerth said. "What is noteworthy is the fact that the C ity of San Francisco has been delivering unfiltered water to its customers."

The water quality figures, he said, are rather arbitrary and a large margin for safety is built in.

"It's a problem of getting things upgraded and that's often difficult," Ongerth added.

Tracy agreed that if the Crystal Springs system was filtered, the bacteria would have been syphoned out and the water would still be drinkable.

Tracy said rainfall washed over the bare banks of the lake — exposed to all-time low levels during the two-year drought — and carried the bacteria into the reservoir.

He called the malady "another legacy of the drought."

"It does not mean that the water supply would cause any illness or discomfort," the water official related. "But, it is a serious warning that something is wrong and the problem must be solved."

The Water Department now operates two modern filtration plants — the Sunol Valley plant in the East Bay and the San Andreas plant in San Bruno. Each cost about $8 million to construct. A Crystal Springs plant would cost about $10 million, Tracy said.

Gene Kelleher, the Water Department's acting general manager, said the improvement would have to be financed by a bond issue. Due to the recent problem, engineering consultants are reevaluating future needs.

"This points up the need for filtration of the San Francisco water supply," Tracy contended.

Normally, Crystal Springs Reservoir is regarded as the cleanest, purest drinking water supply in the Bay Area.

Water quality tests in the spring — required daily by state law — showed the lake supply was ready to flow to suburban customers, Tracy said. The winter turbidity had dropped off and the water company believed the water was ready to drink.

Youth Program Funding

Two youth programs were among three approved for third-year federal grant funding this week by the Criminal Justice Council of San Mateo county.

Their futures appear clouded after next year, when the federal well runs dry.

Local governments are unlikely to be able to absorb costs because of Proposition 13.

The Peninsula YMCA in San Mateo will receive $70,000 in federal money to continue its Central County Youth Service Bureau.

The project will continue to provide around-the-clock crisis intervention services, counseling, recreation, vocational counseling and tutoring.

Tri-Cities Alternatives, a program operated by the South San Francisco Boys Club, also will receive $70,000 in federal funds. The project is similar to San Mateo's.

Also to be funded is the county's Aid to Victims and Witnesses project, but its director, Dave Mandel, is a casualty of Prop. 13.

Mandel, who has headed the two-year project, is among the Probation Department employees expected to be laid off, despite his seven years seniority. He will be succeeded by Jerry Harper.

The federal grant is for $105,000 and the county must come up with nearly $29,000.

Mary's Help Heart Talk

George Prozan, M.D., will talk about the coronary artery bypass procedure at the July 11 Heart-to-Heart meeting at Mary's Help Hospital, 1900 Sullivan Ave., Daly City.

Sponsored by Mary's Help and the San Francisco Heart Association, Heart-to-Heart meetings are in the MHH classroom the second Tuesday of every month at 10:30 a.m. The meetings are intended to educate and provide support to people who have had myocardial infarctions (heart attacks) or coronary artery bypasses. Families are invited to participate. There is no charge.

Organizers of the meetings are Gussie Keyes, R.N., patient care coordinator for the MHH Cardiac Care Unit; Jarvis Green, associate director of the Heart Association; and Cyril Cohn, chairman of the Heart-to-Heart Committee for the Heart Association.

Le Pacini

If Spec Richardson hasn't exonerated himself by now, become cleansed of the infamous Joe Morgan deal while he was at Houston (and I still say it was a good deal at the time he made it), then there is no justice in the baseball world.

The Vida Blue trade, of course, was his master stroke, the cornerstone of the foundation of a winner. But don't forget Mike Ivie for Derrell Thomas, Terry Whitfield for Marty Perez, or Darrell Evans in a multi-player transaction which amounted to Evans for Willie Montanez; a deal which looks like an even trade on paper but which has given the Giants oh so much more on the field and in the clubhouse.

AND THEN Richardson beat the June 15 trading deadline by strongly fortifying a virtually non-existent bench without giving up valuable fifth starter Jim Barr, or anyone else, for that matter, except Lynn McGlothen, who Joe Altobelli wasn't using, anyway.

In acquiring Roger Metzger, Jim Dwyer and Heity Cruz, he transformed the Giants from a team which had to rely on its pitching and pray against injury to its position players, to a solid team with no glaring weaknesses.

The acquisition of Metzger was the kind a serious pennant contender makes, so it proved that the Giants' front office believes in itself as much as the players believe in themselves.

METZTER is 30, and you don't build with a 30-year-old shortstop, but you may win a pennant with a great glove-no-hit aging shortstop who can fill in for a potentially brilliant but now inexperienced and often erratic kid. Johnny Lemaster is the Giants' shortstop of the future, and the Giants have let him know that by getting a Metzger instead of a Robin Yount. But they also are hedging their bets, because nothing is more important in a late season pennant drive than a heady, consistent shortstop.

The Giants were woefully short of outfield depth — they indeed had non. And if Ivie was in the starting lineup, they had no reliable pinch-hitters. But in Cruz and Dwyer they got a righty-lefty pinch-hitting combo each of whom also can play all three outfield positions more than just adequately. As a bonus Cruz also can play third base (he was the guy whom the Cardinals thought a good enough hot sacker to allow them to trade Ken Reitz to the Giants) and Dwyer can fill in at first.

Cruz has power (he led two minor leagues in home runs and RBI) and Dwyer is a good contact man (he twice led the American Association in batting), who, after a career of hunting and pecking, hit 18 homers at Wichita last year in just 130 games. And they both can run.

PERHAPS most important, Richardson apparently did not upset the harmony, the delicate balance, of the club, as I suggested might happen if he were to bring in a player to displace one of the happy regulars. Dwyer never has played regularly in the majors, so probably doesn't expect to. Cruz has played regularly, but he was so pressured by the Cardinals to replace the hard-to-replace and popular Reitz, and then had so much expected of him when he was traded to the Cubs, that he probably welcomes the opportunity to remain relatively obscure with a winning team until such time as he can put himself together and make a bid for a regular's spot next spring training, when everyone starts even again.

Also vital, the Giants got in Cruz a potential star, a 25-year-old with a future, for a formerly sore-armed pitcher, and in Dwyer a 28-year-old who presumably can give them more than one productive season.

AS the erudite — and grateful — Giant southpaw John Curtis pointed out in a recent interview, "What many people don't realize is that in bringing in those players, the most important thing Spec contributed to the club was defense."

Curtis is absolutely right. Manager Joe Altobelli now can make innumerable combinations of moves which will not hurt him — and will often help him — defensively in late innings without appreciably weakening the offense. Not many clubs can do that.

AND NOW we come to Charlie Finley's moves, and you have to admire his nerve for tampering with (at the time) a league-leading team by starting a pitcher just out of high school, trading away his leading home run hitter, and all like that. Whatever else you say about the guy, you've got to admit . . . he's news, and he's fascinating.

BASEBALL MISCELLANY: The Giants currently have the biggest increase in attendance in the major leagues, with only Kansas City close. And they're 60,000 behind the Giants.

One of the potential Giants' trades that was never published until now (remember, you saw it here, folks) would have brought Cub outfielder Jerry Morales here for catcher Mark Hill.

When Tom Seaver pitched his recent no-hitter, some wire service dolt wrote that Sever "had finally achieved immortality." The only thing keeping Seaver out of the Hall of Fame right now is the technicality that he hasn't retired yet. He never would have had to pitch a no-hitter to be a baseball immortal, and would have had good company.

GROVER Cleveland Alexander, Lefty Grove, Early Wynn, Red Ruffing, Burleigh Grimes, Red Faber, Herb Pennock, Waite Hoyt, Whitey Ford, Lefty Gomez, Three-Finger Brown, Kid Nichols, Ep Rixey, Jack Chesbro, Eddie Plank, Stan Coveleskie, and Kid Nichols all made the Hall of Fame without ever having pitched no-hitters.

When Lee Lacy took the injured Dave Lopes' place and ripped the ball safely to all fields, there were those Dodger fans who allowed as how the Dodgers, luckily, weren't missing Lopes. What they failed to notice was that all the while Lacy was hitting, the Dodgers were losing.

Since the day of Lopes; return, the Dodgers have been winning again, gaining ground on the Giants only because they've been winning, too.

MAKE NO mistake. The swift, intimidating Lopes is the key to the Dodger offense, even when he isn't hitting as well as Lacy, in much the same way the relatively light-hitting Maury Wills was their key man in the day of yesteryear.

And unless the Dodger pitching quits collapsing (now ninth in the league in team ERA), their offense is going to have to do it for them.

IN CONTRAST, slugging Boston now has the third best ERA in the AL, in case anybody is wondering how they've managed to pull away from the Yankees this year when they couldn't do it last season with the same hitters.

Earl Weaver is doing his usual underrated damned good managing job with the Orioles. They are in the bottom half of every league statistic, including pitching, which usually carries them, but Weaver still has them on a streak and in pennant contention.

NOW WE know why the Warriors went to Purvis Short of Jackson State — a sort of black, young duplicate of Rick Barry — as their number one draft pick.

What we don't know is why Barry chose to do it twice in one lifetime to his old "pal" and benefactor, Franklin Mieuli.

North Cagers Lose Star Games

SANTA CLARA — The North all-star basketball squads — both the boys' and girls' teams — mounted furious fourth-quarter rallies that fell a bit short Thursday night at University of Santa Clara's Toso Pavilion.

The boys lost to their southern counterparts 104-98, while the girls lost 57-51.

The games featured the top graduating high school seniors in the Central Coast Section.

Neither game was a picture of perfection. The boys' game, in particular, was typical all-star fare — run and gun, with little in the way of interesting team defense.

Capuchino High's Mike Mitchell kept a semblance of order from time to time with his spectacular passing (he dazzled the crowd with seven assists, high for the North), but basically it was a throw-it-up affair.

The boys trailed by as many as 15 points in the third quarter before making their run.

St. Ignatius' Tony Zanze, a 6-7 center headed for Dartmouth, rambled for 15 points in the fourth quarter. Nine of Zanze's points came off free throws, the result of getting Mitchell passes down low where fouls were drawn.

Serramonte's Laron Franklin and San Carlos' Tod Sedlacek each pumped in a dozen points. Both were prominent figures in the second-half North attack, when the running game finally got going.

Three times the North surged to within four points of the South, the last coming with but 3:30 left in the game when Mitchell banked in a layup to make it 84-88.

But in this free-wheeling contest, the North just couldn't outshoot the South's big guns.

The biggest gun was the smallest man on the court, 5-7½ Robert Toloy from Oak Grove High in San Jose. Toloy, not intimidated by big people and big reputations, popped 20-foot jumpers all evening for a game-high 19 points.

Monterey High's Keith Walker added 16 points (14 in the last half) to turn back the North rush.

"We followed our game plan — to play everyone until we found the hot hands," said North coach Bob Drucker from St. Ignatius. "Everyone contributed, but Toloy and Walker gave the South a little too much firepower for us to overcome."

"We put in a pressure defense in the second half that got us running," agreed Franklin, "but just came up short. But it was a good effort."

"The thing is to have a good time and put on a good show in these all-star games," said Mitchell, putting the contest into perspective. "It's hard to get into the flow of the game and get into mid-season rhythm when we've only been together for such a short time. Everyone out here is a star."

In the boys' contest most of the excitement was provided by backcourt men, while the girls' game featured front-line battles involving Parade All-American and CCS-MVP Terri Huff from Notre Dame of Salinas.

Six-foot forward Huff, who has signed a letter of intent for USC, was the game's high scorer with 23 points. She performed to everyone's expectations, dominating the key area.

Battling Huff and the big South front line (that included 6-2 Linda Wright from Camden and 6-0 Kim Fabian from Pioneer High) was Mercy of Burlingame's 6-0 center Liz Bruno and the small North forwards, led by 5-9 North Captain Cindy Galarza from Hillsdale, 5-9 Alisa Wilson from Carlmont and 5-8 Penny Stack from Mercy.

The North played dismally in the second quarter, squandering an early five-point lead to fall behind 29-21 by halftime. With Huff, Fabian and Wright controlling the boards and combining for two-thirds of the South scoring, the South moved out to an easy 40-25 lead.

"I never felt so small in my life," said Galarza, after struggling all evening for shooting and rebounding position. "Every time you'd get the ball down low, you'd turn around, and that's it. No basket visible. Just a bunch of arms and hands."

"We were worried about endurance, so we didn't press until midway through the third quarter," explained North coach Carolyn Buszdieker from Sunnyvale High. "The South controlled the tempo a little better than we thought they would, so we had to go to a press."

Galarza, Bruno and Wilson, with a couple of key steals and hustling rebounds, put on the initial squeeze.

And when they let down, in came running specialists Donna Imsand from Westmoor, Meri Vea Vea from Serramonte and Jill Lucchetti from Terra Nova — guard/forwards with good ball-handling skills and fast-break instincts — to keep up the pressure.

The North quickly reeled off a 20-11 spurt to get within six at 51-45, with 2:23 left.

But that was the closest the North came. Huff settled the matter with a driving bank shot and two free throws, with help from a key bucket by Santa Cruz' Michele Hoga, and it was all but over.

"Oh, but we were cooking out there at the end," said the durable Bruno. "A couple of minutes more in the game, and we would have had them. Darn if it didn't take forever to find the right combination."

Bruno made the defensice play of the game. She was the lone defender on a three-on-one fast break, which she broke up by challenging the startled ball handler, allowing a trailing teammate to snatch a loose ball.

Lucchetti and Imsand, who were playing guard for the first time, both showed an ability to move the ball and the team from the unaccustomed guard spot.

The two should do well at College of San Mateo next year, where they are expected to battle Vea Vea, who had a solid game, and returning Bulldog guards for the two vacant, starting CSM backcourt spots.

Roundabout

(This column is by Brian Blum, writer of the weekly Mustang column until his recent graduation from Capuchino High School. His subjects are of general interest to North County young people. Comments and replies to his observations may be addressed to this newspaper.)

By BRIAN BLUM

The audience was in hysterics the moment they realized one of the graduates was wearing a rubber fish under his graduation cap. The clown's name was called, and he took his diploma. The fish flapped as he shook the principal's hand, and confetti filled the air.

Funny, right? Maybe, but not at a ceremony that should be solemn and dignified. Still, what do today's high schoolers care? We are the self-proclaimed "party" generation — out for a good time now, and damn the consequences.

EARLIER in that particular evening, the principal quoted the school's newspaper, which proudly reported that the class of 1978 will not be remembered as an academic class, or a spirited one either. "But we got two full nights of partying in every weekend," the article said.

For many students, it seems, high school is just one big party. But these kids affect the educational and social experience of even the non-partyers at school.

In high school, students tend to fall into categories. In one corner there are the jocks; in another, the brains; in others, the rummies (the guys on drugs), the rah-rahs (cheerleaders and their friends), and the quiet people.

THE PARTYING group includes the jocks, rummies and rah-rahs. The more serious students — and there are a few of them around — quietly rake in their awards, but in the hallowed high school corridors nobody seems to notice.

Scholarship gets ignored, or even ridiculed, while the prospect of an eight-beer keg bash the next Saturday night makes the headlines. The party group becomes the norm, and if you don't conform, you face being the odd-ball in school.

And being the high school Charlie Brown is something the average teenager, struggling to be accepted by his peers, wants to avoid. An "in-crowd" image becomes very important, and partying is the easiest way to make sure you're "cool" with the "right" people. The alternative is to party a little and act as though you party a lot.

EITHER WAY, the quality of education is sabotaged. When half the kids in a class don't even show up Monday morning after a particular heavy weekend of partying, how do you teach a class? And when the few that do attend are deeply involved in a discussion on how "wasted" they got the night before, can much learning take place?

So, teachers have to keep lowering standards, lest they face flunking half their students simply for non-attendance. (And there's another problem — what value is a high school diploma if any burn-out can get one by just going through the motions?)

Why do students spend so much time partying? The usual reasons: Needing an escape from the problems of parents and school and the future, acceptance by peers, rebellion against the establishment, and just plain boredom.

YES, BOREDOM. That same article in the school newspaper the principal quoted from goes on to say: "We were just bored with the whole situation, and we'd rather be out having a good time." If that's true, then I shudder to think where that puts this country's future if we are supposed to be the leaders of tomorrow. There's more to life than just living for the gusto in the "now."

Maybe it's not like this at all schools. I can only speak for my own alma mater, Capuchino, and neighboring schools I have knowledge of. However, I really believe the party problem, in varying degrees, is one facing high schools everywhere.

Also, isn't it interesting how modern slang has corrupted the word "party" into to a verb? (He parties, you party, they party . . .).

NOW, certainly not everyone parties, and taking in a few parties generally doesn't interfere with a productive life. On the other hand, for more and more students, it seems as if partying is becoming the only way to get through high school. And each year, teachers complain that the entering freshmen are the worst class to hit the school yet. Of course, teachers have been saying this for years. They like to gripe.

Why can't more students be their own person? Why can't they stand up and say, "No, I don't want to party! This is dumb!" If a student hears a different drummer, he ought to follow it.

Instead of trying to hide his individuality by conforming to the party standard, he ought to feel proud. The only thing many heavy partyers feel is nauseous the morning after.

Schools Gear Up for State Funds

Public school districts in San Mateo County today were gearing up for the implementation of the state's plans to distribute a large portion of its surplus to public education.

The one-year package would provide this county's 23 districts with funding based on a sliding scale. Reimbursement would range from 91 percent of 1978-79 projected income to 85 percent. Those figures would involve districts at the elementary and high school levels only.

The San Mateo Community College District would receive 85 percent of its anticipated income, according to the state plan.

All of this is intended to ease the fiscal crunch caused by passage of Proposition 13. In all, $2.27 billion will be allocated for all school districts statewide, grades kindergarten through 14.

The impact on this county's educational system will be significant.

According to an analysis provided by the staff of the legislative committee which created the funding bill, the 23 districts here stand to lose an estimated $25 in revenues in 1978-79.

Most of the local districts find themselves on the low end of that 91 to 85 percent refunding range. That means that many of the projected budget cuts already announced will indeed come to pass.

Before the June 6 election, the San Mateo County Office of Education had stated that losses from passage of Proposition 13 in this county would exceed $100 million.

However, that figure assumed no replacement funds from the state. It was also based on 1977-78 budgets.

Here is a precise district-by-district breakdown of the full financial impact of the bill, according to the legislative staff. A district's potential dollar loss is shown first, the projected percentage decrease second:

- Bayshore Elementary, $63,000, 10.9 percent.
- Belmont Elementary, $480,000, 11.9 percent.
- Brisbane Elementary, $168,000, 13.8 percent.
- Burlingame Elementary, $557,000, 14.7 percent.
- Cabrillo Unified, $566,000, 9.9 percent.
- Hillsborough Elementary, $378,000, 15 percent.
- Jefferson Elementary, $1,164,000, 10.7 percent.
- Jefferson High, $1,640,000, 10.9 percent.
- Laguna Salada Elementary, $736,000, 9.3 percent.
- LaHonda-Pescadero Unified, $142,000, 15 percent.
- Las Lomitas Elementary, $380,000, 15 percent.

County Special Meets

San Mateo County supervisors have scheduled special sessions Wednesday and Thursday to consider which county programs and services, cut during post-Jarvis budget meetings, will be restored with the state surplus funds due to be released next week.

County departments most likely to benefit from the state windfall include the sheriff's office, the district attorney's office, the courts, social services and public health.

Related Story, Page 15

Department directors this past week have been working on a proposed priority list of county offerings to be reinstated. The list will be presented to the supervisors on Tuesday in prepartion for the following two days of deliberations.

There is no precise indication so far of how much state surplus revenue will be allocated this county, but estimates are ranging from $16 to $20 million.

Post-Jarvis budget meetings concluded last Friday, resulted in program and service reductions totalling some $36 million. The cutbacks included the elimination of 1,050 employee positions and the actual layoff of about 850 workers.

County Manager David Nichols and several supervisors are in Sacramento today discussing with legislators specifics of the $5 billion state replacement revenue package approved by a special joint committee on Thursday.

The committee agreed to provide $4.1 billion in direct cash relief to schools and local governments plus another $900 million in short term emergency loans to become effective July 1 when Proposition 13 is implemented.

The total relief for counties would be $1.48 billion. San Mateo County's share of these funds would allow it, according to a county official spokesman, to keep its budget at about 85 percent of what it was before proposition 13 was enacted.

One to Wear 'Dream Girl' Crown Friday

The 28th annual Dream Girl Pageant of the San Mateo County Fair and Floral Fiesta will be staged before a select audience at 8:30 p.m. Friday, June 30, in the Twin Industrial A Building at the fairgrounds in San Mateo.

The contestants will range from prize-winning jazz dancers to a national citizenship award winner.

They include a newspaper writer, telephone operator, skiier, dance teacher, artist, choir singer, concert pianist, and a girl who likes to sew and cook. There are 13 in all.

They will be judged, however, on their physical qualifications. Eighty percent goes for face and figure, 10 percent for poise and and 10 percent personality.

—o—

For the first time in the history of the colorful pageant, two sisters will compete for the title. They are Vera Lysenko, 20, of South San Francisco and Luba Lysenko, 18, of Brisbane.

Both were born in Brazil and speak fluent Russian. Luba is a green-eyed blonde and Vera a brown-eyed brunette.

—o—

Valerie Driscoll of San Carlos High School is a straight-A student with other qualifications. These include piano and violin, painting, drawing and sewing.

—o—

Miss Belmont, "Becky" Johnson, holder of the Soroptimist International Youth Citizenship Award and the Golden Eagle award from the Academy of Achievement, is a past president of the Junior Fair Board and has been a class cheerleader and student body president.

—o—

Also holding class offices was Angelika Salerno of Burlingame who was active on her school newspaper and is a talented ice skater.

—o—

Cynthia DeVita of Daly City can nip the bullseye with a bow and arrow when she is not handling the telephone switchboard or playing tennis, biking or dancing. She lives with her parents, two brothers, a dog, three birds, a fish and a cat.

—o—

World traveler is Cindy Casey of Foster City, who likes river rafting, horseback riding and snow skiing after living in Alaska, Hawaii, Oregon, Canada and New Jersey.

—o—

Talented belly-dancer and quilt-maker is Debra Ann Ketchum, who will parade down the boards unable to show her special abilities in working with children and cooking, among other attractions, but is a definite competitor in the judgment range.

—o—

Tina Bradley of Millbrae, a sparkling personality with semi-professional experience in song and dance in San Francisco behind her, has been a Capuchino High cheerleader and organized dances as well as performed in jazz dance and drama. She's now studying psychology.

—o—

Jayne Yancey, a pert brunette, coming from Terra Nova High in Pacifica is an expert horsewoman, plays the piano and guitar, and also ice skates and wields a tennis racket with effect.

—o—

Cynthia Leslie of Redwood City, a sophomore at San Jose State University, was a pom-pom girl at St. Francis High and has studied tap, ballet and jazz dancing since she was 3 years old. She now teaches dance.

—o—

Sharon Bonelli of San Bruno, who retails clothing at Tanforan when not hunting for a softball game, is an outdoor girl with interests in horseback riding, bike riding, running and swimming.

—o—

San Mateo's candidate is Julie Hoffman, a petite brunette with blue eyes who has developed as an actress in musicals and plays during her Hillsdale High days and who, at 17, is already teaching ballet and has been associated with the San Carlos recreation center. A choir member and former cheerleader, she is now a CSM drama major.

—o—

A dramatic lighting program, rich in pulsating color, will highlight the appearance of the beauty representatives of 13 cities. The colors will play across vibrantly reflecting sequins on a velvety black background.

Two identical twin sisters, Marilyn and Rosalin Borden of the East Bay will provide close-harmony songs and rock and roll rhythms between appearances — first in swim suits and then in stage gowns — of the princesses.

About 300 local officials, ranging from county supervisors to city planners, will second-guess the judges. The invited audience includes the families of the participants and the press.

Judges include Patricia Fripp, owner of a hair-styling salon for men in San Francisco; Lorraine Leigh, owner of a Los Altos modeling school and agency; Hal Lipset, private investigator; R.C. Owens, ex-49er all-pro end; Joseph Freitas Jr., San Francisco district attorney; and scoring judge, Gerald Ferrarri, an attorney.

—o—

The coronation of the dream girl will be on opening night at the fair, which this year runs from Monday, July 24 through Saturday, Aug. 5.

The winner of Friday's pageant will receive cash gifts from the fair and California Jockey Club, a pastel portrait, a photographic portrait, numerous dinner and theater tickets, hair styling throughout the fair, clothing, a camera and modeling courses. She also will receive a large trophy.

She will represent San Mateo County in the Maid of California Pageant at Cal-Expo in Sacramento in August. San Mateo has never won the maid contest, although its representatives have several times won the Miss California pageant and placed in the first five for Miss America. Several Miss California entrants were dream girls.

The Daly City Recreation Department has reminded parents that there is still time to register in summer programs designed for children.

Parents may register children at the Daly City Recreation Department office, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Fees must be paid at the time of registration and children must be registered before the start of each program.

The programs include baton for six-year-olds and below, for six weeks at the Westlake Park Clubhouse. Registration deadline is today. Kindergym, for youngsters 3 to 5 years old, will be at the War Memorial Community Center gym.

The Cities React to Apportionment

Officials of several city governments in San Mateo County Friday had a variety of reactions to the state revenue package voted by a legislative committee Thursday.

In San Mateo, the county's biggest city, officials were smiling and frowning and City Manager Richard DeLong said the news of the state's allocation of funds to him was "bittersweet."

"While it's hard to say you're having a bad day when you receive a million dollars, we've just discovered we're going to have to find another $140,000 to pay for citywide bonds that were issued on the council's vote, and were not general obligation bonds voted by the people."

DeLong said he could only base his estimate that San Mateo would get about a million dollars from the state making the calculations "on a whole bunch of assumptions."

He said, "It's extremely premature to estimate the impact of the state's funding formula on the basis of newspaper reports, which is all we have right now.

"Our calculations indicate that by using the $5.4 million property tax average, based on a three-year income, we would produce $126,000 more than I had estimated. Before I can come to any definite conclusion, I need to know what our proportion of the property tax was and relate my assumption to the formula.

"In general we figure that we would have to cut the budget by $2.1 million, instead of $3.1 million. Out of that would have to come the $616,000 we cut out of the police and fire departments to restore their budget to the pre-Jarvis Gann measure."

David Rowe, city manager of Daly City, said he's skeptical about preliminary reports that the state legislature will fund cities with 90 percent of their current operating expenses.

According to the reports, Rose said, the state legislators will make up $250 million of the $800 million to $850 million loss that cities will sustain due to Proposition 13.

"That's only about 34 percent of the loss. I don't know how they'll distribute it," Rowe said.

If Daly City were to receive funds making up for 34 percent of its loss, Rowe explained that the city would still have to make up $1.3 million in lost revenues.

It is conceivable that the legislature's distribution formula will be more favorable to Daly City than to other cities, Rowe said, explaining that the city has very low per capita expenditures and one of the highest city tax rates ($1.62 per $100 of assessed valuation) in the county.

To deal with Proposition 13's effects, Rowe had prepared a $12 million budget for 1978-79 — down $5 million from the previous budget. Roughly 35 percent of the city's revenues come from property taxes.

However, the City Council has not trimmed services as severely as Rowe has recommended. Instead of totally eliminating libraries and recreation programs, for example, council members decided to go slowly and trim those areas 35 to 50 percent through September 1.

The council has eliminated all temporary and part-time jobs, effective July 28. Notices to those workers were mailed out this week.

In addition, the council has trimmed all social service programs, except for the city's most major social service, the Community Service Center. It will be funded through Aug. 31. The other programs, including the Guadalupe Health Center, child care and senior citizen programs, will be phased out on June 30.

Rowe was to bring a revised budget of $13.5 million to the council Monday. He said he expects the council to adopt some form of budget by June 30 that the city can follow until the state legislature decides how it will distribute California's $5 billion surplus.

That budget will take Daly City through the second phase. In each of the five phases for the coming year, Rowe has proposed eliminating 13 full-time jobs.

Major cuts in city programs remain to be discussed. Daly City's way of handling Proposition 13's effects is to trim a little at a time rather than all at once.

Rowe remarked, "I am skeptical that action on city distribution could occur within the next month or two. I think action probably will come by the first of October."

In San Bruno, Finance Director Robert H. Bodeman said the city is yet to receive any official word on the state's proposed allocation of its surplus to counteract the effects of Proposition 13.

However, if the city is to receive 90 percent of its funding "it will make a huge difference . . . no question about it," he said.

Bodeman cautioned that he has no way of coming up with an accurate evaluation now, but that it would be forthcoming pending notification from the state.

"This represents the first phase of state legislative action on the allocation of available state surplus," Bodeman said. The next phase will be the disbursement of property tax revenues.

San Bruno, without Proposition 13's mandate, would have collected $1.44 million in property tax revenue. Under 13, the city anticipated a loss of about $800,000. "With the restoration of that possible loss, it's going to change the whole picture quite a bit," he said.

"Then if the state decides how to allocate the actual property taxes . . . it could reduce our problem even further," the finance director added.

The impact on Redwood City would be to add at least $120,000 in revenue, according to preliminary figures, said Assistant City Manager James M. Smith.

The city, which hiked fees in building, motel and planning functions, adopted a Jarvis budget Monday which assumed no state funds.

The infusion of state money could save some of the 59 jobs earmarked for extinction next Friday, or save programs in recreation or branch libraries.

The city council, which didn't establish priorities for restoration in the event of state money, will meet Monday night.

Contracts Set For Harbor Jobs

Peter Kiewit Sons Co. of Richmond was awarded a $1,549,020 contract to reconstruct the Oyster Point Marina breakwater and Piombo Corp. of San Carlos was awarded contract to do other harbor work there for $2,488,415 Wednesday night by the San Mateo County Board of Harbor Commissioners.

Meeting in the Foster City Recreation Building, the board debated extensively possible modifications to a contract for the breakwater work, but was advised by staff that delay would run into the thousands of dollars in inflating the bids.

This is because construction costs are being inflated in today's market by 1 percent a month, Bill Caryl, consulting engineer on the Oyster Point Marina project advised.

Already, the cost of services in both of the recently awarded jobs has leaped by huge amounts, they were told.

Just the signing of a task order Wednesday put the cost of the Oyster Point Marina $57,000 over its budget, the board learned.

The Piombo contract authorizes dredging, clay cap, leachate control and other work. The entire marina is built on a garbage dump and the courts have ordered the harbor district board to take action to end leakage from the garbage polluting the waters.

The order must be completed by late December and one reason, in addition to the inflation, for so quickly accepting the breakwater bid was to provide a quick start on the breakwater. It must be in place before mid-fall to enable the other contractors to do the leachate and cap work.

The board found few bidders because of the tight time frame, Ron McClellan, general manager, said. In fact, the two bidders on the dredging were one million dollars apart.

In looking into the breakwater, the board found that of three bidders, the Kiewit firm had concrete forms and concrete ready to go, which indicated a sure chance to meet the time emergency.

At another time in the meeting, Pillar Point commercial fishermen exploded over a move to tack a 100 percent increase on dockage fees and add a brand new charge for moorage in the harbor even though the fishermen provide their own mooring facility.

The moorage fees are 35 cents per boat foot per month under 30 feet, 45 cents from 30 to 50, and 50 cents per foot per month for each boat over 50 feet.

Irate boatowners did not mince their language, with Wilson Hanson saying, "You guys are getting out of line. We are human beings. We are poor people. We are taxpayers. We are supporting the harbor."

Eugene Law, president of the Commercial Fisherman's Marketing Association, said, "This is not Catalina Island. Or Avalon. That is the only place they charge a mooring fee. And those are doctors and lawyers and people like that."

He explained that the fishermen originally had initiated a moderate fee to keep derelicts from the docks. "Not a thing has been done to those docks since they were started.

"This is an insult to our intelligence," Law said.

Len Martin of the Half Moon Bay Fishermen's Association noted that it cost a $1,000 to put in a mooring. Meanwhile, he said, the district would now be asking a fee for mooring and another fee for dockage while a boat unloaded or did repair work. One boat, he said, would be paying double fees daily because of partial use of each facility.

The board, while introducing the ordinance (No. 45), agreed to hold a meeting of the commission with the fishermen on June 28 at Pillar Point Harbor. The 8 p.m. meeting will be in the Harbormaster's Office.

A second reading of the ordinance is scheduled Aug. 1. It could become effective after that.

The board ended a dispute over the Pillar Point Harbormaster's salary by voting to leave all employee salary schedules as they are.

It also ended a dispute over rental fees with John Teixeira, concessionaire at Pillar Point, settling for rental due at $1,126. It agreed to drop a charge for back rent of the fish-processing building of $700.

It was pointed out that previously no rental was charged.

Assault On FBI Agent Told

Two men were arrested by FBI agents early Friday on charges of assault stemming from an incident at the South San Francisco Produce Market.

The men were Paul Miravalle Jr. of South San Francisco and Daniel E. Nardico of San Francisco. Both were said by the FBI to be "lumpers," persons hired by truck drivers to load and unload produce at the market.

Both men are charged with assaulting FBI officers. The incident occurred at 2:30 a.m.

Agents were at the produce market investigating possible violations of federal law there, according to Charles R. McKinnon, special agent in charge of the San Francisco FBI division. McKinnon said the FBI will continue to investigate those possibile violations.

D.C. Medic On TV Show

The issues of birth control and abortion will be examined July 10 at 10 p.m. on Channel 9 as "Turnabout" presents "Choices." The series is produced by KQED and distributed to local public television stations by the Public Broadcasting Service.

Dr. Beth Reimer, a Daly City gynecologist, will explain the effectiveness and dangers of major birth control methods including the pill, intrauterine devices, diaphragms, foams, jellies, creams, suppositories and the newer Billings mucus method.

Help Wanted

The following agencies have requested volunteer assistance from the Volunteer Bureau/Voluntary Action Center of San Mateo County, with offices in Burlingame, Daly City and Redwood City.

The local phone number for area residents is 992-0957, an answering service. Residents also may contact the main office in Burlingame at 342-0801, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

DAY CAMP, FOR THE HANDICAPPED — Many volunteers are needed for the annual outdoor recreation program for handicapped children and young adults at Coyote Point Park in August. Volunteers are the most essential part of the camp due to the time and attention they can give to each camper. Volunteers can assist for a two-week session from 9:45 a.m. to 3:15 p.m., with two sessions to choose from in August.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO AND PACIFICA BOYS CLUBS — Volunteers are needed to tutor high school students in various subjects at both of these clubs. Volunteers can help as little as one hour per week between 1 and 5 p.m. Monday, Wednesday or Friday in South San Francisco and Tuesday or Thursday in Pacifica.

EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICE — About five volunteers are needed to conduct telephone interviews regarding the effectiveness of a community education campaign. This will involve about 20 hours, beginning around the middle of July, in the early evening from 7 to 9. Training will be provided.

For further information about these and other volunteer opportunities for adults or the bureau's summer youth program contact the Volunteer Bureau at the numbers listed or drop by the main office in Burlingame, at 119 Primrose Road. Interviews will be made in Daly City by appointment. A project of the Assistance League of San Mateo County, the Bureau shares in the United Way of the Bay Area and is funded, in part, by the County of San Mateo.

With the best color, best options, and in time for summer. But really don't wait, because we both know that the higher list price will sell the quickest. And these are beautiful cars, loaded with all the equipment a full or personal sized luxury car is expected and designed to have.

PLEASE DON'T BE MISLED
By other dealers stripped down, ill equipped price leaders. Our sale cars are very desirable units, all with air and power features, some with custom 2-tone paint and stereo. These are cars you'll enjoy and be proud to own for many years.

WHY A SALE ON CHEVY'S BEST SELLERS?
To be perfectly honest, holding on to these cars and waiting for that big profit sale is just not our style of selling. It's too slow. And it cuts down our chances with the factory of getting bigger and faster shipments of more Caprices and Monte Carlos.

IF YOU'VE BEEN WAITING FOR THE PERFECT TIME TO OWN A NEW CAPRICE OR MONTE CARLO AT THE PERFECT PRICE
TODAY IS THAT DAY
COME SEE US NOW AND
